“Lifting Drooping Heads and Hands”

One of the simplest and most powerful abilities God has given His people is the ability to encourage one another. In a world that often drains our strength, God calls the church to be a place where hearts are lifted, hope is renewed, and burdens are shared.

The Hebrew writer reminds us, “But exhort one another daily... lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin” (Hebrews 3:13). Encouragement is not optional; it is part of our shared discipleship. It strengthens our faith and protects our hearts from growing cold.

Encouragement doesn't require grand gestures. A kind word, a thoughtful note, a sincere prayer, or a moment spent listening can refresh a weary soul. Paul described a brother this way: “He often refreshed me” (2 Timothy 1:16). What a description—and what a goal for each of us.

Look around the congregation this week. Who needs a reminder that they matter? Who is carrying a hidden burden? Who hasn't been here for a while and might need a gentle message of love?

When we speak life, comfort, and hope into one another, we reflect the love of Christ Himself. And the beautiful thing about encouragement is this: when we offer it, we often find our own hearts strengthened as well.

May we be a people who build one another up (1 Thessalonians 5:11), who lift drooping hands and strengthen weak knees (Hebrews 12:12), and who help each other stay faithful until the Lord returns.
