“How Important is Your Attendance During VBS?”

Vacation Bible School is much more than a week of activities for children—it is an opportunity to plant the seed of God's Word in young hearts. As Christians, we understand the value of teaching God's truth at every opportunity. Moses instructed Israel, "And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart: And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children" (Deuteronomy 6:6-7).

VBS provides a concentrated time of Bible study, singing, fellowship, and spiritual growth. Children are exposed to Bible lessons that help them learn about God's love, His plan of salvation, and the importance of living faithfully. These lessons often remain in their minds long after the week has ended.

Attendance at VBS also encourages friendships among young Christians. In a world that increasingly pulls children away from spiritual values, they need opportunities to associate with others who are learning to love and obey God. The encouragement they receive from teachers, classmates, and members of the congregation can have a lasting impact.

Parents should view VBS as an investment in the spiritual future of their children. While sports, vacations, and recreational activities have their place, nothing is more important than helping our children develop a relationship with God. Jesus said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God" (Mark 10:14).

VBS is also a wonderful outreach opportunity. Many children who attend may not regularly worship with a congregation. A warm welcome, sound Bible teaching, and genuine Christian love can open doors to future Bible study with entire families.

Let us encourage our children, grandchildren, neighbors, and friends to attend Vacation Bible School. Pray for the teachers, invite others, and support this effort in every way possible. The lessons learned during VBS may help shape a soul for eternity.
