“Will You Be My Guest?”

“Would you come to worship with me?” Those few words may seem ordinary, but they can open the door to a life-changing opportunity. An invitation may bring someone into contact with the gospel, introduce them to a loving congregation, and encourage them to become a christian.

In John 1:46, Philip extended a simple invitation to Nathanael: “Come and see.” When Andrew found his brother Simon, “he brought him to Jesus” (John 1:42). These men remind us that helping others come to know Christ often begins with a personal conversation. We may not have every answer, but we can invite someone to hear God’s Word and study it with us.

A personal invitation expresses personal concern. People around us carry burdens we may never see. A neighbor may be lonely. A coworker may be searching for purpose. A family member may want to return to the Lord but feel uncomfortable coming alone. Saying, “I would love for you to sit with me,” can help someone take that first step.

The power ultimately rests in the gospel. Paul declared that the gospel “is the power of God unto salvation” (Romans 1:16). A church building cannot save anyone, and an invitation does not replace a person’s need to believe and obey Christ. However, inviting someone to services provides an opportunity for that person to hear the message that can save their soul.

Our responsibility is to plant and water. We sometimes hesitate because we fear rejection. Yet Paul wrote, “I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase” (1 Corinthians 3:6). We cannot control another person’s response. We can speak kindly, pray earnestly, live faithfully, and keep looking for opportunities. A declined invitation today does not mean the door will remain closed forever.

This week, think of one person you could invite. Give a specific invitation, offer a ride if needed, and plan to meet them at the door
